

The Richmond Republic says:—"An interesting case was begun in the Court of Conciliation in Richmond on Friday. It was a suit brought by Mr. John F. Regnault, against Mrs. Elizabeth Magill and R. D. Ogden, well known as the proprietress and the manager of the Richmond Theatre. Mr. Regnault, says that, shortly after the completion of the theatre, he, at the solicitation of Mrs. Magill, consented to go to Europe as her agent, to engage a corps dramatique. The contract was entered into on the 23d of April, 1863, the power of attorney having been executed by R. D. Ogden, and Mrs. Magill. At the time of making the contract nothing was said about the compensation which Mr. Regnault should receive for his services, the friendly relations existing between himself and the parties justifying him in leaving the question open. Mrs. Magill gave the petitioner previous to his departure $18,800 in Confederate money, which he himself converted into gold and exchange. Gold was then worth about six for one. William H. King, an Englishman employed at the theatre at the time as treasurer, was sent along to assist Mr. Regnault. Arriving in Europe, Mr. Regnault there engaged five actors and four actresses, and to induce them to come, he found it necessary to make small advances on their salaries. The theatrical company was then placed in charge of Mr. King, who sailed with them for New York, Mr. Regnault paying their expenses, to New York, and also furnishing Mr. King with money to pay their expenses from the last-named place to Richmond. The parties engaged came on with Mr. King as far as Norfolk, and the petitioner alleges would have come on to Richmond but for breach of faith on the part of King, who detained the company at Norfolk and played them there for his own benefit. After the return of Mr. Regnault, the petitioner, he furnished Mrs. Magill with an account of his expenses, showing that they exceeded the money paid him by Mrs. Magill by the sum of £60 9s. 6d. The petitioner now claims $290.28 in gold, with legal interest thereon from the 13th of October, 1863, and compensation for his services as her agent for six months, which he places at $1,500 in gold, making an aggregate of $1,790.28.

Mrs. Magill makes a very lengthy reply to the petition of Mr. Regnault, in which she denies that she owes him a cent; that the failure in getting the European company to Richmond Virginia was wholly on account of his incompetency; that he went to Europe as much on his own account, for speculating purposes, as to transact business for her; and therefore in her opinion, he should have been contented with having all his expenses paid by her while he was engaged in transacting business for himself.
